

THE AUTODRIVE CONTENT SYSTEM

What this is: a weekly system that keeps sixteen videos a month moving — filmed, scripted, edited, posted at the right time, tracked — so you get your evenings back, and the audience keeps growing instead of spiking and going quiet.

Prepared by Stalin · For Jitty · September 2026

1 SIXTEEN VIDEOS A MONTH, FILMED FOR THE MONTH

- Film 8 videos a fortnight or 4 a week — and slowly work up to 5–6 quality videos a week, not just more.
- Spread across the business: 1–2 videos per sector — servicing, problems and repairs, used cars, detailing, paint and panel.
- Hook and script every one. Pain-and-problem videos, each one laid out in advance. I only need you for one day a week or fortnight — the rest is mine.
- Thumbnails on everything. Right now the videos go up without one — they look wishy-washy and don't call out to the customer. A thumbnail that names the problem stops the scroll.
- DV posts; they don't manage. They write captions with AI and press post. People can tell — they don't engage with fake-sounding stuff. Social media has to be watched and adjusted based on what's performing. That's the part that's been missing.

2 FOUR VIDEOS READY FOR THE WEEK AHEAD, EVERY FRIDAY

MON Post 5–6 pm	TUE Post 5–6 pm	WED Post 5–6 pm	THU Post 5–6 pm	FRI Next week's 4 videos confirmed by 8 pm	SAT Post 5–6 pm
--------------------	--------------------	--------------------	--------------------	--	--------------------

- I post every day, Monday to Saturday, 5–6 pm — the time our audience is actually looking.
- Facebook groups: I'll post into them with DV's help at first — I want to see how they do it, then make it better.
- Facebook needs its own approach, not just crossposting the Instagram video like DV does now. I'll work that out first, then run it.
- Working towards being 8 videos ahead — the next fortnight already prepared, always.

How the week runs

I personally check every video — edit it myself if it needs it, or send it back to the DV team and work with them until it's right. Every Friday by 8 pm I send you the batch for the coming week (4 videos, or 8 for the fortnight) for a yes. I'll call DV and set the system up with them myself.

THE GOAL

- You stop chasing them. No more messages back and forth during the week — one check on a Friday. One a fortnight once we're 8 ahead.
- Less after-hours work and bad communication. You focus on the workshop.
- A pipeline that's always ahead — and an audience that keeps growing. This is the compound effect: every week builds on the last instead of starting again.
- More data, better videos. I tweak the scripts as the numbers come in, to hit the people we actually want — Adelaide, our customers.
- Fortnightly check-in. I show you how we performed. You tell me anything that came from our online presence — an enquiry, a sale, a booking, someone who said "I saw your video." Then we double down on what worked.

3 WEEKLY USED-CAR VIDEOS

- I'll come and film the 4 used-car videos with you every week. There's a certain way to do them — I'll do it with you until we've perfected it.
- They go into Instagram highlights and the same on Facebook, so the stock is always one tap away on the profile.

THE GOAL

As people come back to the profile each week — and as new people find it — they always see what's on the lot right now. The stock sells itself visually, every week, without you lifting the phone.

4 GOOGLE BUSINESS PROFILE REVAMP

- New business photos, and continual updates as new stock comes in and services change.
- Reviews, every job — and working towards video reviews from customers.
- Photos refreshed monthly; details always right.

THE GOAL

A Google profile that's obviously alive — recent reviews, recent photos, current stock. When someone searches for a mechanic in Salisbury, it says up to date and relevant before they've read a word.

ALREADY DOING — THE LONG-TERM FOUNDATION

THE PART THAT'S RUNNING TODAY

WEBSITE Upkeep — listings, prices, the booking flow, the tracked links. Every video ends at a door that collects the customer's car details before WhatsApp even opens.

PROFILES Continual optimisation — bio, links, highlights, the bio-link animation, the easy booking path.

ANALYTICS I measure everything, basically every day — especially when we're posting continually. Reported to you every fortnight or month, in plain English.

5 WHAT THIS BRINGS IN

The reach, honestly stated. Since the videos changed in July, far more people see them — but most of the biggest number came from one reel, so here it is both ways.

- Instagram reach, 6 July – 10 September (67 days): 92,452 — against 3,084 in the six months before (1 January – 5 July). The 8 September family-car reel is more than half of that (~57,000). Without it: about 35,000 — still eleven times the previous six months, in a third of the time. Source: Meta Business Suite → Insights → Results, daily reach summed.
- Facebook reach, same window: 58,588 against 2,869 before. Same source.
- An ordinary post reaches about 430 people (viral reel excluded), against 44 before. Source: Meta Business Suite → Insights → Content, average reach per post, 1 Jan – 10 Sep.
- How much of that is local: on the everyday reels South Australia is the #1 or top-5 region — but it's 10–20% of viewers, not all of them. 18 Aug BMW reel: 32 of 157 viewers in SA. 3 Sep van reel: 54 of 574. On top of that, Adelaide is the #1 city among followers (20% on Instagram, 17% on Facebook), and followers see every post. Source: per-post audience breakdown in Business Suite; Insights → Audience.
- Followers: 1,162 on Instagram, 459 on Facebook — up from roughly 350 and 190 in early July. Source: Insights → Audience; profile on 7 Sep showed 485 before the viral reel.

So the funnel, using the ordinary numbers, not the viral one:

- 16 posts a month × ~430 people = about 7,000 people a month seeing the videos
- 10–20% of them in South Australia = 700–1,400 local people a month, plus ~300 Adelaide followers who see everything
- We need eleven of them to become customers — about 1 in 100. The rest is upside.

SECTOR	AVERAGE JOB	EVEN IF ONLY...	NEW WORK / MONTH	AND THEN
Servicing	$300–500	5 people book	$1,500–2,500	They come back twice a year. Offered the detail, tyres, aircon on the hoist.
Detailing	$200–700	3 people book	$600–2,100	Easiest add-on: every service, every car sold, every private seller.
Used cars	$1,500–3,000 margin	1 car sells	$1,500–3,000	The buyer becomes a service customer. Your best-ever video was a car video.
Paint & panel	$800–3,000	2 jobs book	$1,600–6,000	Nobody in the groups knows you do this yet. Bumper scuffs get asked about every week.

Together

11 people
a month

$5,200–13,600

Out of ~7,000 who saw the videos
— 700–1,400 of them local. About 1 in 100.

The maths, line by line

- Servicing: average service $300–500. Five people → $5 \times $300 = $1,500$, up to $5 \times $500 = $2,500$.
- Detailing: $200–700 a job. Three people → $3 \times $200 = \600 , up to $3 \times $700 = $2,100$.
- Used cars: a $10,000–20,000 car carries $1,500–3,000 margin. One car → $1,500–3,000.
- Paint & panel: $800–3,000 a job (small scuff repairs $300–600). Two jobs → $2 \times $800 = $1,600$, up to $2 \times $3,000 = $6,000$.
- Together, low end: $$1,500 + $600 + $1,500 + $1,600 = \text{$5,200 a month}$.
- Together, high end: $$2,500 + $2,100 + $3,000 + $6,000 = \text{$13,600 a month}$.
- Over a year: 11 customers $\times$ 12 months = 132 new customers. The job prices are yours to correct — put your real numbers in and the shape of it doesn't change.

THE LONG-TERM VALUE

- Those eleven don't leave. A service customer at $400, twice a year, for five years = $4,000. Fifty of them = $200,000 sitting in the customer base, coming back on their own.
- The videos keep working after they're posted. A "brakes squealing?" reel from October is still being found in March. Every week adds to the library; nothing falls off.
- Word of mouth multiplies it. A lot of this will arrive as referrals — someone saw the video, told their brother. That won't show up in any dashboard, and it's probably the bigger number.
- It will be slow at first. Months one to three build the base. Then it compounds — the same effort brings more each month, because last month's work is still paying.

6 WHERE THIS GOES

The videos are the start, not the point. The point is a brand — the name people in the community say first when someone asks "who do you trust with your car?" A brand is built one way only: consistent value, in public, for a long time. That's what the system is for. And once it exists, it can do things a workshop on its own never could.

NOW Adelaide — the trusted name in the community. South Australia is already the top region on the everyday reels, and Adelaide the #1 city among followers. Every week we add to that until AutoDrive is the default for the Indian and migrant community here — servicing, cars, detailing, panel. The wider Adelaide market follows, with its own approach, once the community brand is solid.

NEXT Interstate is already watching. The family-car video's viewers were 52% Australia, 11% UK, 9% India, 8% New Zealand, 5% Canada — and inside Australia, South Australia wasn't even in its top ten regions. The views were interstate and diaspora. (Source: reel insights, Audience tab.) Those people have family in Sydney and Melbourne who trust the same name. First they ring for advice. Then we give them somewhere to go: mechanics in those cities that AutoDrive has vetted and vouches for, so a customer who trusts us is looked after wherever they are.

THEN If it keeps growing — branches. Opening in another state is hard when nobody knows you. It's much easier when the audience is already there before the doors open. The brand goes first; the workshop follows it.

IT'S BEEN DONE

Royalty Auto Service — a father-and-son independent workshop in a small town in Georgia, USA — spent two years posting real repairs, explained to camera, nothing fancy. Now customers drive from other states, some staying overnight in a hotel, to get their car fixed at "the shop from YouTube". They're opening a third location. Their own advice: simple topics work best, and real beats polished every time. That's exactly what Jitty already does on camera — the only thing they had that we don't yet is the consistency.

The goal, in one line: be the most consistent provider of value online for our community — so that they believe us first, and everything else becomes possible from there.

WHAT I NEED FROM YOU

- One day a week (or fortnight) at the workshop for filming — I'll have the scripts ready, you just turn up.
- A yes on Friday by 8 pm to the coming week's videos. That's the only regular decision.
- Tell me what comes in. Any customer who mentions a video, a post, the website — a quick message is enough. That's how we know what to make more of.
